

Investigating the investigators...

Written by Segolene Tarte

Wednesday, 23 September 2009 16:38 - Last Updated Monday, 28 September 2009 14:57

A paper summarising my progress so far is now forthcoming in Literary and Linguistics Computing.

In this paper, I compare papyrologists to detectives, and set out to find some of the mechanisms that trigger the jumps between the reading levels, where the reading levels are those identified by Melissa in her work on the document interpretation process (expanding on our Ontology subject). The paper also gives an overview of how our image processing algorithms are designed to imitate real-world tasks (expanding on our Image processing subject).

The title of the paper is: "Papyrological Investigations: Transferring Perception and Interpretation into the Digital World"; it can be downloaded in our Reports and publications section.